Sixties buzz

The swinging decade is revived as the spirit of the beehive returns to the catwalk

The catwalk's perfectly coiffed shampoo and sets (upsweeps at Jil Sander and bouffants at Fendi) recall the high-rolling glamour of the traditional beauty parlour. With such devoted attention to grooming, polished clothes are a mid-century update – neat skirt suits, swinging car coats and lean sheaths, all in suburban sweet pastels. Even white patent go-go boots gained a sophisticated twist courtesy of Raf Simons, as they padded along the catwalk to music by Sixties icon Serge Gainsbourg.

"The Sixties... gave us a glimpse of possibility," said John Lennon, and 48 years ago this month the Brits invaded the American dream, as four young men headed across the Atlantic on Pan Am Flight 101. Photographer Harry Benson captures the heady fun of the Beatles on tour in America in The Beatles Book (Taschen). The cultural exchange continues with Warhol coming to the leafy London suburbs this summer, as Andy Warhol Portfolios: Life and Legends opens at the Dulwich Picture Gallery. The exhibition contains some of his most iconic Sixties prints, as well as lesser-known sets such as the Muhammad Ali portfolio.

Escape further into the era to the gilded pools of Sixties leisure-seekers as captured by Slim Aarons in the pages of Backyard Oasis (Quadrille, £40; also an exhibition at the Palm Springs Museum) – don't forget to pack your sunshine-yellow bouclé jacket. EE-B
